

THE 7-FIGURE INTRO CALL

The exact script for turning a booked call into a paying client

Sell like a doctor. Diagnose first. Prescribe second.

HOW TO USE THIS

- This is your map for every sales call. Keep it open on half your screen while you talk.
- Anything in [BLUE BRACKETS] is an instruction for YOU, don't say it out loud.
- Anything in “quotes” is a word-for-word line you can say.
- The goal: they talk 70%, you talk 30%. You ask. They answer. You listen.
- Record every call with Fathom (free). Review one per week. You'll get better fast.

THE ONE RULE: Never pitch until you've found the real problem AND they've felt the cost of not fixing it.

PART 1 • Small Talk (30–60 seconds)

Goal: break the ice, sound like a human, lower their guard. Keep it short, don't overstay.

"Hey [NAME], this is [YOUR NAME]. How's your day going so far?"

"Where are you located?"

React genuinely to their answer. One or two exchanges. Then move.

"Great, glad to be speaking with you, [NAME]. We can dive right in and get started if you're good with that?"

PART 2 • Set the Agenda & Take Control

Goal: you run the call, not them. This frame makes everything after it feel natural.

"Today I want to ask you a few questions to really understand what's happening in your business right now, what your short-term and long-term goals are, and what's standing in the way of hitting them. That tells me whether I can actually help you or not. If I think I can, we'll explore what that looks like. Sound good?"

Wait for a clear "yes." That yes is them handing you the wheel.

PART 3 • Discover Their Current Situation

Goal: get the real numbers. Every answer is ammo you'll use later. Write them down.

"So tell me, [NAME], why are we speaking today? What made you take this call?"

"How long have you been thinking about that?"

"How are you currently getting customers?"

"How many new customers are you getting per month right now?"

"Pretend you could get customers with a snap of your fingers, how many could you actually serve per month?"

"And how many are you serving right now?"

[Do the math out loud with them:]

"So that means you're running at about $[\text{current} \div \text{capacity}]$ % of your capacity right now?"

"What's your current monthly revenue?"

"And what would that revenue look like if you were at 100% capacity?"

Now they can SEE the gap between where they are and what they're leaving on the table. Don't rush past this.

PART 4 • Discover Their Desired Situation & Introduce Pain

Goal: get them to describe the dream in their own words, then quietly show the gap.

“In an ideal world, where do you see your business in 12 months?”

[Probe all three:]

- Revenue?
- Staff / team?
- How would YOU want to spend your time?

“So you’re getting [current] new customers a month, how many would you actually need to hit that goal?”

“Do you have a process in place right now to get new customers at will?”

“How much of your time is going into getting customers?”

“You said revenue is [X], how much of that is actually profit?”

“Are you comfortable running the business like this?”

[Then go one level deeper, this is the most important question on the call:]

“[NAME], can I ask you something a bit personal? You said your goal was [their goal]... so what’s driving that? Why not just stay where you are?”

Shut up here. Let them talk. Whatever they say next is their real WHY, you’ll use their exact words later.

PART 5 • Burn the Bridge (More Pain)

Goal: line up where they are vs. where they want to be, so the gap becomes impossible to ignore.

“Okay [NAME], let me play this back. You’re doing [current revenue] a month and getting [current] new customers. You want to be at [goal revenue] a month next year, so that you can [INSERT THEIR WHY], and for that to happen you need about [needed] new customers a month.”

“So tell me, what’s stopping you from getting there on your own?”

“What have you tried before? Did it work?”

[If YES:]

“Why didn’t you do more of it?”

[If NO:]

“Why do you think it didn’t work?”

LISTEN FOR THESE THREE THINGS

- They can’t do it on their own
- They want to get there faster
- They don’t have the time to do it

When you hear one of these, you've found the opening. That's the exact gap your offer fills.

PART 6 • Create Urgency

“So it sounds like you're serious about taking this to the next level. Let me ask, how committed are you to actually making it happen?”

“And how urgent is it for you, on a scale of 1 to 10?”

If they say a low number, dig: “what would make it a 9 or 10?” Don't pitch a 3.

PART 7 • Summarize & Frame the Solution

Goal: get a clear “yes, that's right” before you position anything.

[Summarize their whole situation back to them:]

“[NAME], let me make sure we're on the same page. [SUMMARIZE: where they are, where they want to be, their why, the gap].”

Wait for them to say “yes, that's right.” Do not continue until they do.

“So it sounds like there's really one thing that would help you hit your goals faster, and that's [the core lever, e.g. getting more customers]. Would you agree?”

PART 8 • Position Yourself as the Bridge

“Based on what I'm hearing, I know exactly how to help you grow faster.”

Then shut up. Let them ask “how?”, that question means they're pulling, not you pushing.

[This example is written for lead-gen. Swap the bracketed parts for YOUR service:]

“Simply put, we specialize in building a system for [NICHE] that gives you control over your flow of new customers. You can turn the volume up or down to match your capacity, so you land in the sweet spot between not enough and too many. And the best part: every customer and every cent is traceable.”

“But I'm getting ahead of myself, this is way easier to show than tell. The next step would be a proper demo call where I walk you through exactly how it works. Sound fair?”

PART 9 • Set the Demo (or Close)

Goal: lock the next step with a real commitment. Assume the booking, offer two times, not “do you want to.”

[Set the frame first:]

“Before we book it, a couple of things: it'll take about 30–60 minutes, you'll want a computer with a stable connection and a mic, and ideally you're somewhere quiet so we can both focus. And is there anyone else involved in the decision? Let's make sure they're on too."

"Perfect, I can do [TIME 1] or [TIME 2]. Which works best?"

"Awesome, [NAME], looking forward to it."

The Mechanics, read this before your next call

THE 70/30 RULE

They should be talking 70% of the time. You're asking questions and listening. If you catch yourself talking more than a third of the call, stop and ask another question.

ANSWER QUESTIONS WITH QUESTIONS

When they ask "how much is it?" early, don't answer yet. "Great question, it depends on what you actually need, which is what these questions help me figure out. Cool if we keep going?"

CALL IT AN INVESTMENT, NOT A PRICE

A price is a cost. An investment returns something. Language matters, use "investment" every time.

HANDLE OBJECTIONS WITH ONE QUESTION

When they hesitate or push back, don't argue. Ask: "What makes you say that?" Then let them talk themselves through it. Most objections dissolve when the person says them out loud.

THE PITCH ITSELF: 3 PARTS, 5-12 MINUTES MAX

- 1. What they get (the dream outcome, in their words)
- 2. How it works (simple, 3 steps, not 30)
- 3. The investment + the guarantee (say the number calmly, then STOP talking)

BEFORE YOU SAY THE NUMBER, CHECK FOR HESITATION

"Before I share what it looks like to work together, is there anything else on your mind, or are you feeling good about everything so far?"

Surface the hesitation BEFORE the number, not after. After is too late.
